Music School Dropped— Building To Become Rec Hall

By Mark Eggstrap

"I have had it!" were the words bellowed by music dean Henry McCraig as he stormed out of a recent Board of Trustees meeting in New York City. His outburst came in the wake of a Board decision to drop the School of Music from the academic curriculum of Ithaca College at the close of this school year.

All efforts will be made by the appropriate parties within the College to either relocate music students into other academic areas, or to help them transfer to another institution. Plans are currently underway to turn the music building into a recreation and social center, according to one Board spokesman.

The reasons cited for this unprecedented action included a "decline in major proportions" with regard to music applicants over the last several years and the growing cost of running the school at a time when the budget can not tolerate further strain. The continued reduction in the academic and social standards of the students admitted to the School of Music also figured greatly in the Board's decision.

Complaining Deans

One Board member reported that Deans from the other schools had been complaining that music students are a bad influence on their students, and had lately been interrupting their previously sound study habits by encouraging them to party and to go home on weekends.

"Music students used to be so good about keeping to themselves and to their practice rooms," complained a professor of Physical Education. "But lately they have been actually coercing my students to party, to drink, smoke, swear and attend concerts!"

At a special meeting devoted entirely to the growing controversy surrounding the usually noncontroversial Music school, the Board rejected a proposal from Dean McCraig to revamp the music program. It was upon receiving this rejection that McCraig exploded.

"Those fellows are nothing but a bunch of old fuddy duddies," McCraig quipped as he tap danced out of the meeting. "I am a man of vision," he went on,

"I have the charisma which leads to charismatic programs. I had a program that would have revolutionized musical education and those morons (the Board of Trustees) rejected it. Well it's their loss, and they won't have Henry McCraig to kick around anymore. They can't fire me because I'm quitting first. That way I make twice the money, with my pension."

Unique Plans

McCraig's plan was indeed unique, to say the least. It consisted of doing away with the formalized music instruction as it now exists, and replacing it with a series of drunken musica orgies. Students would have the option of attending classes in the nude, and could substitute practice time with free sex, since as McCraig pointed out, sex can develop a person's wind "just as much as token on some damn horn!"

In order that a valuable campus asset would not be laid to waste, the Board authorized the renovation of the music building into a combination social and recreation hall. Construction on the building's interior will begin at the close of school in May.

The proposed plans include enclosing the main stage and turning it into a steam bath. The orchestra pit would be filled with cold mountain spring water so students can attain maximum advantages from the steam bath. The auditorium will be turned into a ping pong and billiard hall to supplement the Union's current facilities, and the office space will be converted into a hotel area so that students' out-of-town guests will have a place to stay when they come to visit. The practice rooms are to be converted in supplementary weight and exercise rooms for the athletically inclined students on campus.

Most music students are planning to transfer to other colleges next year because they feel that if they went to another department at IC, "We might have to do some real work for once in our lives."

Four IC Professors Face Trial; Jail

Four Ithaca College professors may face trial and possible imprisonment before the end of this month, said Karl Meupsometime, spokesman for the District Attorney's office.

The professors—Lauren Woodin (music), Thomas Bingham (Business), Herb Newton (History) and Gerry Woodright (Communications) have officially been charged with theft, illegal use of the United States mails and plagiarism.

The four educators had formed their own private company, "Educational Guidances, Incorporated." (EGI) They had made copies of their students' mid term and final research papers, and sold them for a fee of $25.00 plus postage. To avoid detection, they advertised in and sold the papers only to students in Canada and the western U.S.

"Nothing Wrong"

"We have done nothing wrong," insisted Ms. Woodin. "We were only trying to help. We've got the records to prove everything!"

EGI was a non-profit corporation, according to Business professor Thomas Bingham. "All the money we made selling our students' term papers was donated to the School in the form of anonymous gifts. We were only trying to help the College and get the students involved in the process of fund-raising!"

Karl Meupsometime reported that this unusual case is very much a precedent, and no one is quite sure what is going to happen. "They did break the laws—allegedly break the laws—but they did it for the sole benefit of everyone involved. They may get suspended sentences or they may get very stiff fines. I would project the latter. I shudder to think what might happen if all colleges started performing this service."

EGI has been in existence for three years and Gerry Woodright takes credit for the idea. Woodright said the Office of College Development was doing an admirable job considering the economy, but he wanted the College to have more money. "The obvious answer was to offer a service that is needed and people would be willing to pay for. I suggested EGI to the others and they thought it was a great idea. That was at the end of 1971."

By March of 1972, EGI had collected over $500 for the School. That money went for dorm renovations. "I had no idea how the money was obtained," commented Vice President of Business Finance Paul Farina. "I don't usually look a gift horse in the mouth. Or any other horse for that matter unless he comes from a ranch with a balanced budget."

During the three years of its existence, EGI has managed to donate almost $8,000 to Ithaca College. "We've only done good; we're really not criminals," protested History professor Herb Newton. "I don't really see what they can do to us."

The professors were freed on their own recognizance and continue to teach at Ithaca College, pending decision and paperwork by the District Attorney.

Administration Offering $200 Tuition Rebate

By Andy Freakman

Students who enroll for the Fall, 1975 semester by April 30 will receive a $200 rebate. Their bill will read $4837, not the $5037 it will cost those who enroll after April 30.

The reasons for the rebate program were outlined by Eileen Dickin's Son, a high administrative official: "No other college in the entire world is doing it. The student who is being priced out of an Ivy League school might now turn to Ithaca. Our rebate program is extremely unique and if publicized widely, can be an excellent testimonial to our uniqueness."

When asked how he felt about the "testimonial to Ithaca College's uniqueness", President Hellis Phlops replied, "Which Ithaca College?"

The idea for the rebate program was "lifted" from those of automobile manufacturers. Ford, GM and Chevrolet started the bonus in January and within one month reported a sharp increase in sales. Soon every business from dishwashing liquids to vitamins to prophylactics were offering a cash-back deal on their product. The prophylactic company was offering to pay for part of the abortion, should one be necessary. Now Ithaca College has joined the bandwagon.

News of the program has already reached the New York Times. A special feature on it will appear in this Sunday's magazine. Executive Vice-President For College Relations And Resource Development Not To Mention Alumni Giving And Foundation Grants On Occasion Charles McGourd reports that Communications dean John Kissmeyoufool is making a series of public service commercials on the subject, using V-P for Student and Campus Affairs Constantly I. Amanass.

Inside sources at Cornell report "If it works for IC, you can bet your bottom inflated dollar we'll be doing it too, within the week." Princeton U. and Boston College have hinted at similar threats.

Since the rebate was unofficially announced yesterday, reportedly over 400 students have already enrolled. A crowd of them surged to the registration office sweeping along everyone within its path. Not only had the students enrolled, but two Safety officers, a Physical Plant worker, a maid who still speaks only Spanish and the Provost's secretary Marge Dispensewither

"It was really incredible," remarked registration secretary Hunky Dory. "I didn't know we still had that many students! I don't get out of this office much, you know. Tell me, how is Grant Egbert these days? Is he still trying to unionize?"

The official announcement, including all the conditions attached to the rebate, will be sent to each student presently enrolled by intercollegiate mail. Another high administrator was overheard to say: "Heh! Heh! Heh! That way, they'll all receive the information sometime next year, when it'll be too late, and we can get credit for offering the rebate without actually going through with it! By the way, I'm not high, I just have a 'buzz'. Come back in about 20 minutes."

An intrepid student had overheard this and spread the word, which accounted for the 400 enrollments. Any other students who wish to enroll to receive the rebate should see the Provost, third floor Job Hall, immediately.

Curfew Reinstated: No More Late Nights

Beginning April 5, 1975, IC students will no longer be allowed out of their dorms after the stroke of midnight on weekends and after nine o'clock on weeknights. This curfew also pertains to visiting privileges by males, who in the past, have been able to invade the females at any hour they please.

This devastating decree was descended from "high above Cayuga's waters" according to Vice President for Student and Campus Affairs, Constantly I Amanass. He added, "If you ask me if it was the President who ordered the ruling, I won't say it was or wasn't him. But I can honestly say that no one currently in Job Hall was connected with the order."

No one knows exactly why the curfew was enacted. Some feel it was because of the excessive rowdiness of the IC students. Others are inclined to believe it had nothing to do with the students behavior. Both the administration and the students were unavailable for comment.

Housing Plans

Of course, with the new curfew, all dorms will have to be rearranged. There can no longer be coed dorms which may cause the Housing Department a lot of trouble. Don Onion, Director of Residential Life, says the lower quads will probably be filled with all guys, while the upper quads will be inhabited by the girls. Mary Beth J., Director of Housing Operations, fears that the newly redecorated Lyon dorm will once again become a "zoo." She was quoted as saying, "If Lyon Hall is all guys again, you can just find yourself some other girl."

Student Body President Andy Parsley is up in arms about the whole situation. Although Parsley will not be returning next fall, he could not believe the administration could stoop so low. After considering the President's height, the rest of Congress felt it justified for the administration to "stoop so low". Finally putting his arms down, Parsley had this comment to make: "I'm glad I'm graduating."

Further Explanations

For those who still don't understand what is happening come next fall on the Ithaca College campus, it was probably best described by SAB chairman Russell Pussycat, before his disappearance: "Well, the guys are gonna live on one half of the campus and the girls are gonna live on the other half. Now, concerning visiting privileges, as far as I understand it, there are no visiting privileges. Now that's a real pain in the orientation host hat...How are we going to be able to communicate? How are we going to be able to talk to one another? How am I going to shoe poor, unsuspecting, voluptuous freshman coeds the swan? Hey, why should I care, I'm not going to be here next year! On the other hand, I may come back to visit on weekends...."

There has not been a curfew on the IC campus since 1967. That was abolished because of the complaints not from students but from the parents! It seemed that since the boys and girls were not mingling and interacting at all, there were no pregnancies that year. And when there are no pregnancies, there are no scandals. And when there are no scandals there are no complaints. And with no complaints to complain about, who wants to send their kid to school for 3500 dollars a year!!

Students are not expected to sit around and take this lightly. The consensus is that most kids are planning to sit around and take this curfew lightly. They plan to stand around whoever claims to be the President of the College and see if he takes this curfew deal lightly.

CIIS Offers New Fall Courses

By Fatty Foyle

The Center for Interdisciplinary and Individualistic Studies (CIIS) has been working since January to create some new and interesting courses. CIIS Director Willard Dates noted "the courses should be relevant to the student and community as well."

The courses are open to everybody, except where otherwise noted. Dates said everyone should soon be receiving sign-up information in the mail, but for those who are over-anxious to register, the courses are offered below. They will be offered next fall. If you are interested, contact Willard Dates in the CIIS office, second floor of the Muller Faculty Center.

Cohabitation 301-29. Dave Anton 3 credits: How to work out the problems of marriage before the marriage. This course deals with personal interpersonal relationships, such as living with a member of the opposite sex without the sex. These credits can not appear on your college transcript, because officially this course does not exist.

Reshaping Education, 100-19, 4 credits: Realizing the need for changes in a liberal arts education, this course deals with the theories of establishing a "College A" and "College B".

Educational Controls 100-20, 4 credits: Accepting the fact that a "College A" and a "College B" could never co-exist, this course deals with stopping all efforts of the Reshaping Education course. Special emphasis on how to be an expert heckler at meetings and brainwashing others using simple propaganda.

Social Services, 119-42, 3 credits: This course is unique in that there is no one professor. The student shall spend one to two weeks with each fraternity or sorority to learn the true spirit of brotherhood, friendship and the satisfaction of vital social services. Special emphasis on frat rivalry, throwing firecrackers on the quad at 2 AM without being seen by Safety, how to make a "Killer snowball" for those after dinner winter games and where to throw water in a water fight so it will cause the most damage.

Teaching Made Easy 381-00, 3 credits, teacher's name withheld on request: For all those seriously considering the educational fields, this course deals with how to hold up to 15 classes per week and not teach any of them, through extensive use of hand-outs, TAs and lab assistants.

Ithaca College - on $5 a day, 000-39, 3 credits: An extensive look into the finances of the College and how a student could realistically afford IC on just $5 a day, all inclusive. This course is not open to: EOP recipients, Financial Aid charters or anyone on scholarships.

New Donation to Create Academic Center

Ithaca College students are going to be treated to a new look on the campus when they return to school next fall. In one of his last official acts as President of the College, Hellis Phlops has made a personal donation of considerable size to the Physical Plant in order that they may renovate the central quad.

The exact size of the grant has not been disclosed, but sources within the administration report that it exceeds six figures several times over.

Phlops commented that ever since he had assumed the office of President four years ago, he had hoped to be able to turn the quad into the academic center of the College. He feels he is on the verge of a dream come true with the development proposal he has submitted to Physical Plant.

The primary change in the proposal deals with the quad's landscape, which will be turned into a bi-level rock garden. Phlops said this will greatly enhance the aesthetic beauty of the campus, in addition to providing the Botany department with a chance for "some good field work."

A ten foot gold-plated statue of the outgoing president will dominate the center of the garden. Phlops said that this will also serve a dual purpose, since it provides art students with an excellent model. (Assuming that there are any art students left, once the administration sees the editorial in this issue.)

A sand pit is being constructed to provide physical education students with a chance to weight lift, study, think, and build sand castles. This will be located on the edge of the garden close to the Union so varsity team members will be in a better position to catch the table scraps thrown out of the dining hall. In addition to the pit, a waterbed is being installed for the cheer leaders to practice on.

"I am greatly excited with the potential this garden offers to the students," Phlops asserted, "and a garden of rocks is indeed a fitting memorial to myself and the members of my administration."

Pussycat Still Missing

Two Suspects; No Ransom

• By Ellis Phillips
staff reporter

Director of Safety and Security Lou Withoutiam told reporters at an early morning press conference that he now has two suspects in the Russell Pussycat disappearance case. No one at the meeting seemed particularly interested.

Pussycat disappeared two months ago after a Student Congress meeting at which he introduced a resolution that would entirely restructure the Congress. According to representative Tom Blohoward, the resolution was "not too popular." Final decision on the motion would come at the next Congress meeting when, in Blohoward's words, "it would be voted on."

Pussycat's Motion

Pussycat's motion would reportedly create a "smaller, more equalized, more efficient Congress for everyone, and especially for people under 5'6". Hos plan called for:

Educational Representation: One person, 5'6" or under, shall represent all the academic areas of the school. This person shall have a cum not lower than 3.4 and not higher than 4.0. (Presently there is at least one representative from each academic area of the school and cum does not affect qualifications.)

Living Area Representation: One person, 5'6" or under, shall represent all the living areas, instead of the present system of one rep from each dorm. The living areas rep does not necessarily have to be living in any specified area, as long as he knows at least one person in each of the areas he represents.

Organizational Representation: Clubs and organization shall caucus and elect 10 reps to be known as the "Club Council". They in turn shall elect one person, 5'6" or under, from amongst themselves to sit on Congress. Final approval of this must come from the chair man of the Student Activities Board.

Pussycat's proposal would thus create a three person Congress, a system Pussycat insisted would be "far more effective."

But there was opposition. "Conceivably, one person could fulfill all those requirements," Blohoward noted dramatically, "and instead of a three person Congress, we would have a one person dictatorship!" He further noted that Russell Pussycat fulfills the requirements of his own proposal and if passed, Russell Pussycat would be Congress.

Back To Our Story

"As close as I have been able to reconstruct it," Withoutiam continued, "Pussycat went up to the Pub after the meeting adjourned. He had several drinks and tried to pick up everybody in sight, including his SAB co-worker Howard Baboon."

He apparently had no success and stumbled out, muttering, "But I was Orientation chairman! I know thousands of freshmen girls!" He then went out the back of the Union and headed across the quad," Withoutiam reported. He has not been seen since.

"We never found a body. No one has asked for a ransom. We don't know that he's dead but there's no proof he's alive."

"We do have two suspects—one, a buxom freshman girl who's applied for position of Orientation chairman. She's been acting suspicious lately. The other suspect is Bob Saccharin, who was known to hang around Pussycat whenever he wanted a favor. We're keeping them both under surveillance."

In the meantime, Congress is reportedly moving smoothly, having accomplished more in the past three months than in the past three years. "No one seems to care or even care that he's missing," commented Congress member Sharon Horse. "But Congress cares! We're offering a $500 reward for anyone with information regarding his disappearance to keep it very, very quiet."

A NEW INVESTIGATIVE REPORTING COLUMN

Dear Readers

Following a complaint by a reader that the worst offenders of the Ithaca College Judicial Code and of the New York State Penal Code were none other than SASP members, I received an anonymous phone call telling me to be in the basement of the East Tower at 1 AM that night.

Following instructions I arrived early finding the premises empty. A short while later I heard several people coming down the staircase. I ducked into the nearest doorway, suspicious and vaguely afraid.

There were two of them and as they passed my hiding place I distinctly heard the sound of a walkie-talkie which led me to believe they were SASP members. They went around to the other side of the basement where Physical Plant has its administrative offices. I caught sight of the East Tower conference room door closing just as I came around the corner.

A light had been on and a vague rumble of voices could be heard. I decided to try to find out what was going on. I went outside and moved along the window until I found a curtain with a gap large enough for me to see inside.

What I saw astounded me. There on the table were a couple hundred bags of white powder and a green substance resembling marijuana. (I don't think they were trying to corner the market on sugar and oregano.) The one occupant facing me in the room I could see I recognized as Lou Withoutiam, the present head of Safety and Security. As occupants of the room shifted positions I recognized several members of the SASP force and other students with walkie-talkies that I did not know but supposed to be members also.

They seemed to be having some sort of argument with a person or persons unknown to me who was out of my field of vision. I supposed they were haggling about a price for presently Mr. Withoutiam came forward carrying a stack of bills and then he and the SASP members started carrying the stash on the table from out of the room.

I was shocked. The next day I was determined to try to find out more about what was going on and who had tipped me off. I wondered if all of this could be happening without the knowledge of other Safety officers on campus.

The next night I attempted follow several SASP members on their nightly rounds, at a reasonably discrete distance, of course.

Twice the pair I was following stopped in a secluded spot and stood around talking and smoking something resembling a cigarette. When they left I went to the spot and smelled a strange smoke different than cigarette smoke.

I concluded it was not spinach, but a reefer. On other occasion I saw SASP members enter students' rooms in the quads

College Faces Second Blackout

It will be cold showers, reduced lighting and absolutely no stereos next week as the College is faced with its second power failure in two years.

This year's blackout will be no freak accident, however. Thelthacan has in its possession a memo dated April 20, 1974, from VP of Student and Campus Affairs Constantly I. Amanass to the then Director of College Development, Charles Boardhead.

"Dearest Chuckie," the memo begins, "That transformer idea of yours was the greatest moneymaker this College has ever seen! We saved over $12,000 on heating and electricity bills last week. We could only continue it for a week, though, before people started getting suspicious. But still, we made $12,000 clear profit! Brilliant!!

The memo continues to attest to the originality of the idea and then develops plans for a power blackout during the first week of April, 1975.

Barbeques will be held out of doors on the Union quad all week to save the electricity normally used to run the dining halls. The outdoor swimming pool will be closed and dishes and silverware will be washed in it. Because the Pub uses too much electricity to make keeping it open worthwhile, it will be temporarily shut down. The bookstore, however, will be giving away free six packs with any purchase of $25.00 or more.

"The highlight of the week," suggests Amanass's memo, "really should be a soundless concert, featuring Ithaca's own Orleans, in the Ben Gym (the Lights will be turned off.) It will be held in the dark and Orleans will lipsync their songs to a soundless recording of their greatest hits."

Last year's blackout, while providing multiple inconveniences, also did more good than one might expect. Junior Bobby Pin recalls, "Yeah...it like, it brought everyone together, y'know? The people downtown opened their hearts and their homes to us IC students, like, we all made out okay. Especially me. I made out with three complete sets of stainless silverware and $42 worth of small change from people who opened their homes."

The Health Center reported a sharp increase in the number of students requesting birth control pills. With the heat practically off, students snuggled into bed with each other.

Wealth of Knowledge

After extensive studies, including interviewing all the Ithaca College tour guides for the past six years, the Ithacan discovered that the beauty of the IC campus is the single most important factor in persuading the prospective student.

Yes, it is the graceful beauty of the fountains in the library, Terrace dining hall and Dillingham Center "moat" that impresses people. It is the music building abstractly shaped like a piano and the unique lines of the Dillingham Center that attract attention. The view of the town at night, Lake Cayuga in the Fall; it is the spectacular visual delights that, in the end, lure the students to Ithaca College.

It may sound odd to you now. You may scoff and say "ha! An education is what is important, not a view!": but think back. Back to when you first toured the campus and to Orientation weekend. Didn't you oooh and ahhh at the blue waters of Lake Cayuga sparkling like blue diamonds? Weren't you struck with the aesthetic beauty of the library? The main theatre? The Terrace Dining Hall? You know you did.

So.

So in times of economic uncertainty it is clear we need to attract even more students to IC. More wealthy students. The way to attract wealthy students is to provide an education in posh surroundings. No one will enroll here if the campus is reminiscent of a slum, or even a suburb with homes that sell for under $75,000. One needs wealth to attract wealth.

Instead of budgeting a mere 2.7 million dollars for Physical Plant, we strongly recommend that this figure be increased to 6.7 million dollars. The following is a list of where the money could best be used; in the best interests of attracting the rich and the super rich to attend Ithaca College:

1. Carpet and air condition Friend's Hall.

2. Install telephones in every room.

3. Connect the 8th floor of the West Tower to the 8th floor of the East Tower with a lounge-games room.

4. All stairways will be replaced with escalators.

5. The Terrace's mudlot will be replaced with a 3 story parking garage.

5. The 'Crossroads will be outfitted with insulated wall panels, enabling it to be used as a sauna on Friday and Saturday nights when nothing else is scheduled.

The additional four million dollars to implement these recommendations is easy to obtain. Cut out the Art and Physics department from Humanities and Sciences. Cut out the Grad School and cut out the track and gymnastics teams—statistics have shown rich kids don't go in for either of those sports. Perhaps at a later date we could institute a fox hunt or a polo team.

Of course, these suggestions only half solve the problem. They will get the rich to apply. But then they have to be accepted.

It is our recommendation that first priority go to all those applicants whose fathers earn more than $100,000 per year. No scholarships will be awarded, which will save the College money. There will be no need for financial aid programs, which will save the student money—presently almost $500 from every student who is paying his own way goes into the Financial Aid program.

The end result? The College will be financially sound, absolutely gorgeous, and will provide an education in a superior setting.

The Way It Really Was

A celebrity slowly sinking into obscurity comes onto your television screen once each night—if you are watching Channel 2 and quickly gives the viewer a capsulized version of what was happening in American history "200 Years Ago Today."

Either because there is not enough time in the 60-second-Shell-Oil-sponsored commercial or due to the intrepidity of some astute censors, the true picture of what actually happened "200 Years Ago Today" is not what you see on the screen.

Our researchers have come up with the following information for exactly how it was, April 1, 1775.

Newly married Mrs. Thomas Jefferson made it with the delivery boy from Jones's General Store today. "My husbands always in another state, metting behind closed doors with a bunch of stuffy old men," she told the delivery boy. "I'm beginning to think I've married a closet queen, and I shudder to think what that "Declaration of Independence" he's always referring to, is going to sound like!"

Patrick Henry, really a drug addict, had been trying to go cold turkey. He stumbled into the pharmacy on this date 200 years ago today, wild-eyed and delirious, shouting, "Give me librium or give me meth!" History would later misconstrue this to be "Give me liberty or give me death" and would honor Henry for such a patriotic remark.

The very first light bulb was invented on this date. Fenwick Smythe created a burning filament inside a glass container just after midnight. He turned to show it to his wife, who quickly remarked, "I don't give a damn what you've invented. Turn that thing off, I can't get to sleep." Fenwick suffered a heart attack that night and the light bulb was destined not to be reinvented til many years later.

A husky young farmworker called Paddy Standish decided to swim the Atlantic Ocean. He had gotten halfway across when he decided he could not make it all the way, so he turned around and swam home.

Board Member Disagrees

To the Editor:

I read with great interest in your last issue so it was to my amazement and disappointment to read the remark on page 8, following the continuation of an article by a custodian concerning the high cost of living, that stated, and I quote directly from the article, "This is an educational-business to the Board of Trustees and not a school with very real people with very real feelings who deserve the very best education they are paying for" and therefore I feel I must rebut that comment to the best of my ability being that I am on the Board of Trustees for Ithaca

College and I do, in fact, feel that this is a real school with real people who have educational needs, and not just another business and I have always pushed for just that sort of "educational" awareness on the Board so feel the remark was unjustly made and I'd like to inform the student body that the Board does care about them and their educational needs and requirements and not to worry, we are trying to get more qualified professors and special guest speakers to appear here for the general edification of all concerned and in conclusion, I'd like to remark that the Board is doing an exceptional job and the students are doing a peachy job of learning, too, and if you would like a recording of this statement in my own voice, please send $2.99 for the album and 3.99 for 8-track tape to: PO Box 1, Marine Inland Center, Podunk, Illinois and if you order before midnight tomorrow you will also receive an autographed color picture of H & S dean Ted Faker streaking through the opening of of the new Podunk McDonalds.

Sincerely,
Barry Cade,
IC Board of Trustees

Letter From a Starving Child

To the Editor:

I used to be a child slowly starving to death in an underprivileged country. Then came the Coalition on World Hunger, Care and the American Red Cross.

Thanks to the efforts of the kind people, there is food in my country now.

We have Norman, Count Chocula, Frankenberry and Super Sugar Crisp cereals for breakfast. We have tuna fish (which may or may not be tainted with mercury), bologna (with its colored casings and chemical additives) a whole assortment of Oscar Meyer cold cuts (we still haven't figured out how to open the package), white bread and cola soda (did you know if you leave a human tooth in a glass of cola overnight, it will be half rotted by morning?) for lunches.

And we have tons of frozen tv dinners (We don't have ovens in this country, much less electricity). Mrs. Pauls fish sticks (grinded up fish heads and tails, breaded, with a hint of flavor) and 4000 cases of hamburger helper (someone forgot to inform them that the cow is still sacred in this country).

Now we are no longer dying of starvation. Now we are dying of malnutrition. We will stick to berries and leaves. Please keep your cereals, your lunches and your dinners to yourselves, and may God help you.

Lon De Luck, age 16

Kitchen 1975

By Jay Bobbin

This reviewer seldom, if ever, admits to being mistaken about the subject of movies. However, it seems I was wrong in saying the disaster genre was just about spent, for now comes the most appetizing crisis-morsel yet, Kitchen, 1975. Based on a novel by Waring Blender, the film is a multi-jeopardy mixture which comes together when the dishwashing machine goes on a violent rampage and begins to drown all the residents of the household. (By the way, you feel as well as see this sequence; it is presented in SUDSAROUND.)

The acting is first rate...that is, considering the casting of the stars. John Denver plays the patriarch of the household, and he sings several of his hits (such as "Suds-shine On My Shoulders" and "Leaving on a Jet Spray"). Cary Grant co-stars as his architect-airplane pilot-minister-father, U. Buildem (with Moms Mabley as his assistant, I. Breakem). Linda Blair portrays Denver's wife, a brave young woman suffering from acute alcoholism, a kidney ailment and a strange affection for crucifixes. (When asked in the film why she stays so upstanding and respectable, she replies, "I was just Born Innocent, I guess.")

The rest of the star-studded cast includes Ronny Howard, Dick Clark and the Osmond Brothers as the children; Olivia Newton-John as the Australian maid who keeps saying, "If you love me, let me know" to her fiancé as he drowns in the dishwasher; David Bowie and Alice Cooper as the couple next door; Jesse White as the Maytag repairman; and Jim "Catfish" Hunter as a policeman who tries, unsuccessfully to pitch the excess suds out the window. (Charlton Heston and George Kennedy appear in cameo roles as survivors of a mid-air plane crash that occurred during an earthquake.)

Kitchen 1975 is an exciting thriller that leaves you with a profound message- movies are really too soapy these days. It's going to be shown at the Ithaca Theatre, which will show only family movies from now on. (And if you believe that one...)

The Best Of Telly Savalas

By Muck Raker

Not only is Telly Savalas a great actor and shuffle board player, he is a great vocalist. Mr. Savalas (Kojak on Kojak) has just come out with his first album. It's called The Best of Telly Savalas.

Telly (in case you're wondering, Telly is not really Telly's real name- the name that appears on his birth certificate does not coincide with the one on his driver's license) really shines on this album--so does the album cover if you hold it the right way. Some of the top songs are on side one. Some of the bottom songs are on side two.

The reason Telly sings so well is that the orchestra drowns him out on two-thirds of the album. Telly really does a good job, however, on "The Good Ship Lollipop"; the percussion sound being provided by Telly as he beats himself silly with a Tootsie pop.

The Best of Telly Savalas was produced by Telly's brother, Stavros Savalas, who can also be seen on Kojak. It is on the Warner Brothers label, although they won't admit it.

The album is probably one of the most interesting albums to hit the record stores in a long, long, long, long time. As a matter of fact, the sales of this record have surpasses all others in the category of bald, male Greek, medium height, stars of a TV series-singers. WOW!!!

This reviewer, along with some friends of his from Arkansas, feels the album has a lot of potential. Although he has not listened to the entire album, this reviewer feels the album has a great chance to become one of the vinyl hits of the year. (Vinyl is what the record is made of; sometimes that's what the stars are made of, too!)

The Best Of Telly Savalas is only the beginning. With the way the album has sold, as of this moment in time, there is sure to be a second album on the market rather soon. In fact, there has been some talk that the album may be recorded "live" on the set of Kojak. The title of the new record is expected to be The Best of Telly Savalas, Part 2: A Live Kojak Recorded Live On The TV Set of the Famous Mr. Kojak, Kojak! Don't Be Surprised It's a Double Album.

ITHAFICKS

By Some Mulligan

This weekend, the Ithaflicks is really pretty proud to present some really pretty good flicks. On Thursday and Friday, there will be a very exciting flick. The flick to be presented on Thursday and Friday should be very exciting. I say should, because no one's (that should have been, no one has) seen the flick yet. We do have the title of it and the plotline and as soon as I finish this line I will tell you about it.

New paragraph. The title of the flick is The Paper Chase. The plotline of the flick to be shown on Thursday and Friday is as follows: it's about a guy in college-law school, if you want to get picky about it--and his never ending battle against the maids who work in his dorm. You see, there's never enough toilet paper, and...Probably the best scene in the whole flick is when the star of the flick, Timothy Tops, traps the maids in their storeroom and tries to stuff eighty four rolls of toilet tissue in his jockey shorts.

Saturday and Sunday follows Thursday and Friday which brings us to our next flick. The name of this flick is a tough one to remember. But I know the plot line like I know my own name. It's about a school marm back in the good old days who gets herself involved with a couple of really nice guys who plan the greatest robbery this side of Edwin S. Porter. It's got a lot of laughs and a lot of meaning.

For those of you who are fans of the "Addams Family", this flick has the guy who played Lurch in it. He has a great part. He gets to fight one of the stars of the flick and one of the stars of the flick gets to kick him in the groin. Real life stuff!!

It should be a real wild weekend at the Ithaflicks this weekend. Now don't forget! on Thursday and Friday the flick that will be playing this weekend is The Paper Chase. It will be shown at 7:00 and midnight. Admission is 50 cents and a certified Russell Pussycat Fan Club card. And on Saturday and Sunday the flick that has no name will be shown at midnight and at 7:00. Admission is $3.50 for adults and free for card carrying hippies.

Next week should be even more exciting. The Ithaflicks will be presenting "Little ZLeague Moochie" and, if the College will approve, Xaviera Hollander and Linda Blair in "Yes, I Go Down, But Only If You Let Me Hold The Crucifix."

Music Box

Saturday, March 4th--Johann Sebastian Bach will be back at Ford Hall. You'll know him; he'll be wearing the white violin in his lapel.

Monday, June 32nd--The Norman Tabernacle Choir will be at the Unicorn beginning at 7:30. Unfortunately, there is no room for the audience, so tickets will not be sold at the Egbert Union, Willard Straight, or Mayers.

Thursday, May 1st--Betty Swan will perform her first works at Ford Hall from 8:00 on. Some of the music will be played on a real piano; Bach's fourth movement will be hummed backed up by Ritchie Lum on the electric shoe horn.

Tuesday, April 22nd--Soprano Sylvia Soddeneimer will return for a return engagement in a free public concert at the School of Music on the eve of her wedding night. Miss Soddeneimer has been studying voice under Professor Pain N. Thebutt of Luther College in Bayonne, New Jersey. Other singers for the day's events include Billy Goat, tenor; Steve and Edie, matzo; and Hal Deli, mustard-baritone. These fine performers have not been studying under the auspices of Professor Pain N. Thebutt.

ABC-TV 'Wide World' To Feature Women's Team

By Marc Shaeffer

ABC-TV's 'Wide World Of Sports' will be broadcast from the indoor pool of the Ben Light gymnasium Sunday as Ithaca College hosts the fifth annual Eastern Division of the Women's Drowning championships.

"We're all very excited about it!" enthused women's coach Linda Hand. "Our girls are in fine shape this year and they have been waiting for this all year!"

The Drowning begins at 5:00 PM sharp, as it is being televised live. The first category of competition is the lightweight class, poolside drowning. The diving drowning comes later.

When the starting pistol is fired, the contestants have to jump in the water and drown as quietly and gracefully as possible. The reason for the "quiet" aspect was explained by IC's hopeful in the diving drowning competition, Celia Later.

"It used to be you could be noisy as all heck. You could even thrash your arms about and scream. But two years ago one contestant was injured- she got in the way of someone's flailing arms, broke her nose and was disqualified. So they changed the rules. Now you have to drown coolly and calmly, not like some wil amateur," Celia said.

Asked about the safety of such a sport, coach Hand offered the assurance that the girls receive the best protection possible. "As soon as the first two girls have drowned, we have a staff of highly trained, expert volunteer lifeguards who rescue the remaining competitors immediately. This process has worked quite well so far."

The University of Maine has taken the poolside drowning trophy home each year and is expected to do so again this year despite stiff competition from Penn State and the State Pen. IC is the favorite for the diving drowning.

Women's drowning is a particularly rough sport, asserted coach Hand. "There are no preliminary or qualifying meets, practices are long and strenuous and the Championship itself is murder!"

"This is something I've wanted to do for the longest time now," vowed Celia Later. "I just know I'm going to win this year. For my school, for my country, for Mom, for Dad and for Chevrolet."

Fifteen schools will be competing in the Championship. The winner's family will receive the grand prize of $35,000 and the family of the runner-up receives $17,500.

Tiddlers, 15-0, Plan Final Victory

This certainly has been a year for Ithaca College sports, and the Tiddlywink team has been no exception. Winning every match at home and on the road, the IC Tiddlers travel to Wippitallout, Minnesota, Saturday, to face the San Diego Winkers in the world famous Cereal Bowl.

Coach Wilbur Gibson attributes the team's success to its star tiddlers, Charles "Chuck" Waggon and Dan Druff, both sophomores. "Those guys have great thumbs," Gibson remarked proudly. "Not only muscular thumbs, but flexible ones too. Couldn't ask for anything more!"

Last year the Tiddlywink team had a miserable season and Gibson felt it was time to recruit new blood. "I scouted all of IC's other teams," he reported, and "Just picked up those athletes who were all thumbs."

their opponents, right through to the Eastern Seaboard Toilet Bowl, where they faced the Delaware Dunkers in the match that determined the eastern champions.

"We're number one," Gibson announced. "And we'll stay that way. This San Diego team will be no sweat."

If the Tiddlers are victorious this Saturday, they will be the only Ithaca College team to have a perfect record this season.

"It would be extremely beneficial to the School if they win the Cereal Bowl," commented Charles McGourd, Executive Assistant Vice President for College Relations and Resource Development Not To Mention Alumni Giving and Foundation Grants on Occasion. "From a percentage of the gate receipts alone, the School is going to make enough money to fully

Their toughest match this year was against the Boys Club of Tickapoo, Pennsylvania. The Club consists only of kindergartners with a criminal record, so they were given a "bonus lead", or handicap.

"That was a tough one," Gibson recalled. "But with Chuck and Dan here, we just couldn't lose."

The Tiddlers smashed all redecorate the Tower Club!"

A special charter plane has been hired for all those students who wish to accompany the Tiddlers to Wippitallout to help cheer them on to victory. The cost is $60.00, including round trip air fare, hotel accommodations and all the lemonade you can drink on the flight down. A sign-up desk is in the Union Lobby all this week.

Hockey Coach of The Year

SUNY-Connecticut not for her educational background, but her athletic abilities. "She was a whiz on the ice," reported SUNY coach Sue E. Suey. "No one ever dared get in her way! She scored over 40,000 goals in two seasons, all unassisted!"

After a two year stint at SUNY-Connecticut, Candee decided to transfer to the University of Washington, Oregon. "It's colder up there. There's ice almost all year round and I can spend all my time on the ice."

It was clear to everyone that Candee's first love for the ice and hockey would always come before any man. That, and her 6'2", 228 pound, 48,56.48 figure.

And then it happened. Candee fell in love with a 5'0", 98 pound weakling dying of terminal acne. They had a brief but passionate love affair in the locker room and he died. Candee put her skates into hock and spent the remainder of the semester mooning and pining and pining and mooning for her dead boyfriend.

The part of her life that landed her in the Correctional Institute of Connecticut is sordid and certainly does not belong printed in a newspaper. If you

No matter how many arms or legs are broken on the ice, how many WELL-AIMED & well-placed goal shots become new forms of birth control, win or lose, the guiding force behind the IC Women's Hockey team is the coach, Ms. Penny Candee.

Ms. Candee comes to IC from the Correctional Institute of Connecticut where she not only coached the women and the men prisoner's hockey teams, but was also released after 10 years, for good behavior.

Born out of wedlock in Hoboken, New Jersey, Ms. Candee's first interest in ice hockey came at age 15. She recalls, "I remember the sidewalks were really icy. I'd get up a good run, then slide for one, perhaps two blocks on the ice, hitting people with a club as I went. Then I returned and relieved them of their wallets."

After dropping out of high school ("In my neighborhood," she related, "Diploma was the guy who came to fix the sink!") Ms. Candee applied to the State University of New York-Connecticut. There she carried a double major of Physical Education and Oriental Philosophy.

Ms. Candee was accepted at are interested, write to her at this address and she will send you an autographed manuscript explaining the entire story: Penny Candee, care of the Ben Light Gym, Ithaca College, Ithaca, New York, 14850 and be sure to include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"And here I am. Out of pining and mooning, realizing that life goes on. And I'm back with my first love- a hockey stick and an ice skating rink," Candee said proudly.

Editor's Note: No one was paid for any writing, typing, or any work put into this issue- it was done on a voluntary effort in attempt to provide IC with a source of offbeat humor.

It was all done in fun with no harm intended to anyone. Well, almost anyone...

It was meant to help you forget about your problems for awhile, about other's problems for awhile, and just...laugh.

Happy April Fools, everybody.

SHOCKING PRANK IN THE BIOLOGY LAB

The Dept. of Biology has announced that they have discovered that someone (or ones) unnamed has been growing test tube babies in the chicken ova incubator in the science lab.

A Science Professor told today of his shocking discovery; that students in the genetics labs have been using human ovum in their experiments instead of chickens. The Professor said somehow the human eggs must have been substituted. The most shocking aspect of this "Dastardly prank" is that the human ova were fertilized. This means that if the genetics classes had not chopped up the five day old eggs in blenders that a real fetus might have developed.

The prank was discovered when the professor in question happened to look at the cells through one of his students' microscopes. It was only due to this freak occurrence that anyone even became aware of the fact.

The fertilization of the human ova is no simple matter which leads investigators to suspect a highly intelligent person probably with some background in science is guilty. At present members of the FBI were seen leaving the office of the Provost but no allegations have yet been made.

From Our Files

Changing your eating habits will help to make more food available to those who need it by reallocating the money for SAGA into relief agencies. According to Dr. Lester Brown of the Overseas Development Council, if the American demand for beef were reduced by 10 percent for one year, it would free for human consumption at least 12 million tons of grain. This would be enough to prevent the famine now developing in India and Bangladesh.

Such a reduction in beef shouldn't harm American's diet since, as the book Diet for a Small Planet points out, the average American consumes 10 to 12 percent more protein than

The article attacking the legitimacy of S.O.S. is seen by the group's members as a misguided judgement. Our group is indeed concerned about the plight of the starving millions, and perhaps if you look closely at our proposals you will see what we mean.

We agree that complaint's are part of human nature. But the food service involves 70% of the student body with substantial money involved, if this money is directed wisely we can learn in the long run to eat better and to conserve money. This money can be put to better uses i.e. alleviating world hunger.

A brief review of S.O.S. aims are 1) better the quality and preparation of food, 2) installation of infra-red lights, 3) improved use of our board money, and finally a partial meal plan.

Instead of thoughtlessly calling us selfish and heartless, Harcourt pointed out that all these groups interact and are necessary for Ithaca College to relate to society.

The controversial issue of Student Body officers. President Teller told what had transpired during the summer. He centered his discussion on the Presidential Search Committee, and what had happened concerning it. At Humanities and Sciences, is attending too. He offers that every individual should have a purpose behind what he is doing. There has to be some basic idea of education for an institution yet theories differ with each individual.

Harcourt replies with the idea that maybe there is a need for a stronger administration to pump in more variety and decide exactly what kind of person is needed to keep an exciting balance in each department.

Other comments concern whether we really are overquestioning ourselves, if anything is really getting accomplished for the student, and if faculty believe in what they are doing.

The seminar ends almost two hours later. No definite answers have been reached, but several ideas were voiced and people became exposed to many viewpoints. Provost Darrow will remain the host, and hopes to meet at noontime every other Thursday in the Buffer Lounge of Egbert Union. The next proposed meeting is for Sept. 26th. Watch for announcements.

Filming

and coming out with money in their hands.

It is my impression there is considerable graft and corruption in our positions of student and administrative authority, but not wishing to wash the College's dirty laundry in public, let this article serve as a warning to all involved that there are persons aware of what is going on and if this does not stop immediately, or at least include me in for a cut, action will be taken.

Question: As you may or may not know, $2000 is allocated each year for something termed "pet policy protection". How do you feel about this?

"Nobody really understands us. I come on campus and hang around the gym because I've got a crush on one of the guys there. But he never notices me. This is a real case of puppy love, let me tell you! They should use the $2000 to set up rap session between the students and us."

"I think it's great. It's about time someone offered us canines protection from the human element. Does this mean we are going to be protected against the fiends who try and feed us Saga hamburgers?"

"I can't believe they spend all that money trying to keep us off campus. Dogs have never had a place of their own. We're the third most discriminated against in the animal world, after mosquitoes and black widow spiders. I just want to be friendly."

"It is an obvious waste of money. For 89 cents they could buy a box of Liv-A-Snaps that would last all year and they could lure us off campus with doggie treats!"

Kim: "I don't care how much they offer the Safety guys to get rid of me. I'll leave campus when I'm good and ready and not a moment before. Ever wonder what happened to the short, dumpy officer with glasses? He was my Thanksgiving dinner. Just watch your step, Lou."

From the Registrar...

Those students seeking financial aid from the College should file a Parent's Confidential Statement no later than February 10, 1975. Applications after this date can not be considered.

Our door is always open, except when it's closed. Anyone with suggestions on how to make registration more fun than it already is, please drop by to discuss them with us.

The calendar for the 1976-77 academic year is currently undergoing careful revisions. To save fuel costs, Spring vacation will be tacked on to the end of the Christmas break and Thanksgiving vacation will be moved to the middle of March. October is being cancelled completley and school will begin the second week in August and end April 14. Any comments concerning these changes should made in writing to God.
